- 1. Please provide a brief statement describing your institution (e.g., mission statement, student demographics such as residential/commuter, full/part-time, etc.).

James Madison University is "committed to preparing students to be educated and enlightened citizens who will lead productive and meaningful lives." Its six colleges offer programs at the undergraduate, master's, educational specialist, and doctoral level. In '02-'03, 3,474 degrees (3,162 undergraduate and 312 graduate) were conferred. The Fall, 2002 enrollment of 15,612 included 14,402 undergraduate, 684 graduate, and 526 special students. Of the 14,507 full-time and 1,105 part-time students, 60% were female, 40% were male, and 11% were minorities. Forty-two percent of the undergraduates lived in JMU housing.

The JMU teacher education program is currently transitioning to five-year programs in elementary education, middle education, secondary education, health and physical education, and special education. Four-year programs will continue to be offered in early childhood education, art education, and music education. Advanced programs are offered in middle education, reading education, secondary education, school administration, school counseling, school psychology, speech and language disorders, art education, and music education.

2. Describe your conceptual framework (no more than 5-7 sentences).

The Conceptual Framework that guides all James Madison University Teacher Education programs is informed and guided by the ten INTASC Principles, the teacher competencies required by the Commonwealth of Virginia, the National Board of Professional Teaching Standards, and the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education. It is fueled and strengthened by current and emerging research and knowledge in human growth, cognition, and learning, and is guided by the moral purpose of contributing to human needs in a pluralistic, democratic society. That is, all children can learn and deserve competent, caring, knowledgeable, and skilled teachers as they progress through all levels of the educative process. The Conceptual Framework is bonded together through a continuum of teaching and learning, a deep commitment to collaboration, and a common core of student knowledge, skills, and dispositions that are measured and assessed through a comprehensive set of performances and demonstrations.

3. Describe briefly current partnerships with K-12 schools.

JMU's teacher education program is significantly involved in both formal and informal partnerships with local P-12 schools.

- Four faculty liaisons with ¼ release time and two full-time teachers-in-residence serve our four formal partnerships with Augusta County, Harrisonburg City, Rockingham County, and Waynesboro City.
- All programs have extensive field experiences and/or field-based courses in area schools.
- P-12 personnel serve on numerous committees, panels, and task forces to assist in the design, implementation, and evaluation of teacher education programs.
- Teacher education faculty serve on a variety of advisory committees in the local schools.
- Our teacher education program sponsors annual P-12/university faculty awards in four areas of partnership service Teacher Preparation, Professional Development, Inquiry, and Service.
- Numerous other informal partnership activities provide a meaningful link with other local school divisions.

8. Briefly describe mentoring/clinical faculty programs at your institution.

James Madison prepares clinical faculty to supervise its student teachers through the MidValley Consortium for Teacher Education, a partnership of four colleges (Bridgewater College, Eastern Mennonite University, James Madison University, and Mary Baldwin College) and six school divisions (Augusta County, Harrisonburg City, Rockingham County, Shenandoah County, Staunton City, Waynesboro City). Clinical faculty receives two days of intensive training in observing, coaching, and evaluating student teachers and is compensated at a higher rate than cooperating teachers. Clinical faculty who supervise JMU practicum students and student teachers also earn units toward tuition waivers for JMU course work.

Clinical faculty receives three-year appointments and must attend at least one of the annual refresher workshops in order to renew their appointments. Currently the consortium has 700 trained clinical faculty. Approximately 35% of the cooperating teachers JMU uses each year are clinical faculty.

Several faculty and staff members also serve on local school division mentor advisory councils.

9. Please provide the following information regarding faculty in your professional preparation program:

- a) number of full-time faculty 65
- b) average number of courses taught by each full-time faculty 3.23
- c) number of full-time faculty with K-12 teaching experience 65
- d) number of adjunct faculty 29
- e) number of courses taught by adjunct faculty 60
- f) qualifications for teaching as adjunct faculty (briefly describe)

Adjunct faculty must meet university requirements for adjunct faculty, have a master's degree (doctorate preferred), and have P-12 teaching experience in their teaching field.
