Dear Parents, Alumni and Friends of JMU,

As another academic year begins, the Bluestone staff is again preparing to provide the best possible historical record of the year at James Madison University. We are committed to capturing and preserving the enthusiasm, diversity and uniqueness of the 2007-2008 student body and academic community, as well as commemorate the university's Centennial.

Over the past few years The Bluestone has been recognized for its outstanding achievements by many of the country's top journalism associations. The 2003 edition received the Gold Crown Award from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association for outstanding achievements in writing, editing, design and production. The Bluestone was one of three collegiate yearbooks that received this prestigious award out of 500 books judged nationwide. The Bluestone staff was also acknowledged as six members received Gold Circle awards for their individual efforts. The 2003 edition was also recognized for a Best of Show Award by the Associated College Press in Dallas, Texas last fall. Recently, the 2004 edition received the Silver Crown Award from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association in New York City in spring of 2005.

In order to continue to strive for this level of excellence, we need financial support. And so we turn to you, members of the JMU community. Without your support and contributions, our expansion, changes and improvements would not be possible. To show our appreciation and gratitude, the names of those who contribute $10 or more will be included in a special section of the yearbook dedicated to our patrons. Those contributing $50 or more will be listed as Diamond Patrons, and those giving $100 or more will be listed as Madison Patrons. In addition, those contributing $50 or more will receive a copy of The Bluestone's 2007-2008 edition.

If you have any questions at all, please give us a call at (540) 568-6541. Thank you very much for your support of The Bluestone and of James Madison University.

Sincerely,
Stephanie Hardman
Editor in Chief
