Bridges

Bridges, the CISAT Duke Dog, has a coat of many colors – most of which are from the CISAT Color Palette. The design consists of 11 sections. Each section contains a distinct pattern and color combination. The color combinations are colors that specifically identify the departments within CISAT. The pattern within each section also represents the corresponding department. In some sections this connection is made directly, while in others, the pattern may be more abstract. The sections come together at a point on the back of Bridges, much like the 11 departments and organizations that work together to form the College of Integrated Science and Technology.
