Which Web Builder is Right for You?

The most selected color box is your best fit!

Start Here

How much time do you have to complete your website?
- A few days
- More than a week
- I've got weeks to spend on it

How familiar are you with web builders?
- Not at all. I want it to be simple and intuitive.
- Not very. But I'm excited to play around and learn.
- I am up for the challenge. I want it to look professional

What type of work will you be showcasing on your site?
- All kinds. Photos, YouTube videos, documents, blog articles, or other files.
- My content is mostly visual; I don't have much writing.
- My content is writing-heavy. I have blog articles, research projects, PDF documents, and images to display.

How important is creative control? Do you want to be able to change your template?
- I want to have a lot of different templates with some customization. I want to be able to change my template at any time.
- I want full control over changing and customizing my template's design. I'm okay with being stuck with my chosen template.
- I want a lot of template options, but I don't need customization or control over the design.

How do you plan to organize your site? How large will it be?
- My site structure and menu will not be complex. I plan to use no more than 10 pages.
- I want to limit the content on my pages and have an animated flow to my site.
- I want the option for unlimited pages. I plan to post, blog, or share different "categories" of content.

Would you like the option to change your site's HTML/CSS?
- Yes, I want the option to customize the code.
- I'm not interested in accessing the code, but I have the option to add HTML/CSS elements.
- I want to change the code and I'm willing to pay to do it!

Weebly is the place for you to start! It offers templates that work well for written and visual work. The intuitive drag-and-drop interface makes customizing your pages a breeze! (But if you're not happy with the options, you can brave the HTML/CSS customization option.)

Weebly is great for beginners, simple to learn, and easy to get started. It offers lots of modern, professional-looking themes and a mobile editor. So if you're feeling nervous about making a website or don't have much time to work on your project, Weebly is the builder for you!

Wix's emphasis on visual content and animated transitions is for you! Careful not to get lost in this builder's enormous template selection. They're sorted based on individual needs, but once you've made a decision there are plenty of options that allow you to alter the design: you can edit each element on a page to make it look exactly how you want it to, and even guide how you want the viewer to navigate through the content on each of your pages.

But if you have commitment issues, be warned: once you get started, you can't change your template!

Sounds like you're ambitious enough to tackle WordPress.com! Although it can be complex and takes some time to figure out, this web builder is the most professional of the three builders.

Wordpress skills are sure to catch the eyes of employers, but be prepared to spend time clicking through the Dashboard to get what you want. WordPress is less user-friendly and intuitive than other web builders, but it's an ideal platform for writers, and it can connect users to an enormous network of fellow bloggers. If you choose a free template, be warned: customization usually comes with the cost of an upgrade.