- Awards are for up to $2,000 per academic year to eligible adjunct faculty for professional development (including conference fees and travel) related to teaching, scholarship and research, career planning, and/or leadership. Monies cannot be used for tuition. Monies are only for singular events or activities; that is, adjuncts cannot lump multiple requests (e.g., two conferences) into one proposal.
- Awards are intended for adjuncts whose primary role at James Madison University is that of teaching. Those not eligible to apply are classified staff members, A&P faculty, emeritus faculty, visiting faculty, scholars in residence, and full-time faculty, as those terms are defined in the Faculty Handbook or university policies.
- In order to apply, adjunct faculty must have taught for one semester or more, at the time of application, at James Madison University. Eligible faculty are asked to discuss this funding opportunity with their unit heads prior to completing the application. Professional development monies will only be granted for activities that transpire in the future; that is, these awards are not intended to reimburse faculty for past professional development activities.
- Award recipients will submit a brief professional development activity report, to be used later to share the impact of these monies on the recipient, student, programs, etc.
