

"In attending these events, I tend to see a lot of people who go back again and again; who are hungry for not only this type of knowledge about teaching but also for a teaching community. I began seeing these people around campus and inviting them into my classes and I'm able to do more interdisciplinary work this way. Also, what I've noticed in the School of Theatre and Dance is that a number of my colleagues attend these events and when I miss one, somebody reports back. A lot of the good work that's being done gets passed around."

*Zachary Dorsey
College of Visual and Performing Arts*