

"It's really about community...at a conference on High Impact Practices I found that I gained more information not from going to the conference and sitting in the sessions, but from talking with the other CFI scholars about what we do in our classes. It's a resource that was unexpected; we thought we'd go to this conference and learn one thing but we ended up finding more information through our peers. That's been the biggest impact from a classroom standpoint."
