

Katrina Goodman

Katrina Goodman is the Deputy Inspector General of Investigations (Chief) at the Office of the State Inspector General (OSIG) in Richmond, Virginia. In this role she leads a Supervisory Special Agent, five special agents (certified/sworn law enforcement professionals), a forensic analyst and an accreditation manager. She also oversees both the State Fraud, Waste and Abuse Hotline team consisting of the Hotline manager and three senior investigators as well as OSIG's Healthcare Compliance Unit which is comprised of a Healthcare Compliance Manager and two Healthcare Specialists.

Chief Goodman is a veteran law enforcement officer with over 26 years of service with state and local agencies. Prior to assuming her current position, she served two years as Special Agent with OSIG, four years as a Special Agent and Senior Special Agent with the then Virginia Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC) Bureau of Law Enforcement and 14 years as a patrol officer and Detective with the Roanoke County, Virginia Police Department. Chief Goodman began her career as a patrol officer spending a year and a half with the City of Lynchburg, Virginia Police Department. Chief Goodman possesses extensive investigative experience conducting and managing complex criminal investigations such as undercover operations, homicides, physical and sexual abuse cases and narcotics trafficking. She is also a seasoned regulatory investigator having investigated internal policy, procedure and code violations as well as employment and financial compliance matters.

Chief Goodman holds a Master's Degree in Criminal Justice from Longwood University. She also holds a Bachelor's Degree in Sociology with a concentration in Criminal Justice and Pre-Law with a Minor in Spanish, also from Longwood. She is a Certified Virginia Law Enforcement Command Executive, a Certified Forensic Interviewer, Certified Fraud Examiner and has received the Association of Inspectors General Institute for Investigators Certification. Chief Goodman is also a General Instructor for law enforcement training, an FBI-LEEDA trilogy award recipient and graduate of the 51st session of the Virginia Chiefs of Police Association's Professional Executive Leadership School (PELS).

Katrina resides in Midlothian, VA, a suburb of Richmond, with her husband and two daughters.
