IF you are accepted into a program you will send original documentation of proof of funding for the full term of your study at James Madison University's Graduate School so that we can process your I-20. The funds for the first year must be guaranteed, either currently on deposit in a bank account or documented in a scholarship letter. Funds for the subsequent years must be committed by your sponsor or scholarship source. If you are relying solely on your own personal funds, you must show funding on deposit for the full term of your study. Bank statements must show liquid assets and may include checking or savings accounts, certificates of deposit, or money market accounts. NOTE: Showing funds greater than the minimum amounts helps you when you meet with the U.S. immigration officer for your student visa. We do not accept real property, corporate assets, or salary letters.
