

LIFE WITH COVID-19

Despite challenges, Ambar focuses on light at the end of the tunnel

PHOTO ESSAY BY: Celina Wickham

Learning tasty recipes, driving scenic routes, and applying fresh coats of nail polish are some of the activities Ambar Gonzalez has explored since the quarantine began.

Unfortunately, the arrival of Covid-19 has negatively impacted many lives including twenty-four-year-old student, Ambar Gonzalez. Recently, she lost her job and had to file for unemployment in order to survive financially. At first she felt as if her life had come tumbling down but as time passed, things began to look upwards. "Now I can do a little self-care and all the activities I didn't have time for beforehand," Ambar exclaimed. One by one, she has checked items off her list of hobbies to explore. With hiking being her favorite hobby so far, she figures social distancing isn't too bad when she can nurture her relationship with nature.

In preparation for Covid-19's repercussions, Ambar has collected enough cans to keep her well-fed and entertained.