OIR Update

Help!

As we explore ways to better serve you and the JMU community, we need your help. Please take this brief survey to tell us about your information needs and your experiences using our resources to help inform your decision-making. The survey will remain live until Friday, August 30 and takes about six minutes to complete.

80¢

That’s the number of cents out of every dollar of state appropriations JMU spends on instruction and academic support, which is the most among its national peer group. 5,248

This is the number of undergraduate and graduate degrees conferred by JMU during the 2018-19 academic year. The number of degrees conferred was down slightly over 2017-18 numbers (5,268). OIR produces information on the number of degrees conferred by major. This information, along with plenty of other official JMU data can be found on our website.

New Team Member

OIR is happy to welcome our new Assistant Director for Data Integrity. Nick Harvey is a Harrisonburg native and holds a Bachelor’s degree from JMU and a Master’s from the University of North Texas. He comes to OIR from the Libraries and brings experience with multiple JMU technology systems. Nick loves learning about the latest tech trends and finds it very rewarding to take complex things and make them simpler. He enjoys working with databases and web applications and hopes to make the work of Institutional Research even more efficient. In addition, Nick wears another hat as the principal trumpet of the Waynesboro Symphony Orchestra, and enjoys being with family, making music, and enjoying the blessing of living in the Shenandoah Valley.
